

Courtroom Connect Announces Remote Counsel Stream 3.0 Release

Release to provide internet streaming universally to exiting realtime software products

ATLANTA — August 6, 2009 — Today at the National Court Reporting Association Annual Convention and Exposition, Courtroom Connect announced the immediate availability of Remote Counsel Stream™ 3.0, which enables deposition streaming through the Internet to remote attendees using any realtime software product in which to receive the realtime text. Video footage may also be made available via Remote Counsel Stream.

“This release represents a dramatic advance – a quantum leap forward for realtime”, said Grover Mundell of Courtroom Connect. “Our court reporting clients can now provide realtime via the internet to law firm viewers no matter what software the law firm uses. In fact, remote viewers can be using different software to receive the same realtime transcript and it makes no difference to the reporter.”

Customer Deployments

Many reporting firms and software developers have already benefited from Remote Counsel Stream 3.0. Mike Murray of 1360 Studios, a software solutions developer for the legal community, recently completed testing of Remote Counsel Stream 3.0. “Courtroom Connect has taken deposition streaming to a whole new level with this release” said Mike Murray, president and CEO, of 1360 Studios. “Our software clients just got Internet realtime functionality added for free. They can use Transcript Manager Pro when they are receiving realtime from across the table from the court reporter, and now from across the globe.”
